"Handsome is as handsome does," quoted a Chicago man to his wife on a recent occasion. "Yes," rejoined the lady, in a winning tone, and holding out her hand, " for instance, a busband who is always ready to hand some money to his wife."

Married ladies will be so good as to hold the Norwich Bulletin responsible for the following: "Don't you think," she inquired amiably, "that most men are possessed of a devil ?" He said he thought they were, particularly after they were married.

A Norwich man has invented a plan in three parts by which no one need lose his life in a burning hotel. The first part states that a man should never stop at a hotel. Omitting the other two parts, the plan is generally bonsidered a success.

Among the replies to an advertisement of a music committee for "a candidate as organist, music teacher," &c., was the following: "Gentlemen, I notice your advertisement for an organist and music teacher, either lady or gentleman. Having been both for several years, I offer you my services.15

The following is a verbatim copy of a tomb stone inscription in Pennsylvania: "Battle of Shiloh, April 6, 1872, John D. L--, was born March 26, 1839, in the town of West Dresden, State of New York, where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest."

& But I pass," said a minister one Sunday in dismissing one theme of his subject to take up another. "Then I make it spades!" yelled a man from the gallery who was dreaming the happy hours away in an imaginary game of euchre. It is needless to say that he went out on the next deal, being assisted by one of the deacons with a full hand of clubs.

65" "It was at the critical moment of the battle," said a Dubuque minister in an impassioned burst of eloquence last Sabbath, "when the Wuke of Dellington-I mean the Delk of Wullington-I should say, when the Welk of Dullington-that is, when the Dule of Welkington at the wottle of Batterloo-er um-" And then somehow the passage appeared to be so badly mangled that he didn't think it would pay to repair it, so he said, "And seventhly and lastly," and went on.

A story is told of a shrewish Scotchwoman who tried to wean her husband from the public house by employing her brother to act the part of a ghost, and frighten, John on his way home. "Who are you ?" said the guidman, as the apparition rose before him from behind a bush, "I am auld Nick. was the reply. "Come awa', man," said John, nothing daunted; "gie's a shake of your hand; I am married to a sister o' yours."

Merriweather lives in one of a row of houses which, as is generally the case in Allentown, are uniform. He thought the other night he would scare Mrs. Merriweather while she was in bed, so he rose and dressed in his night shirt. and went upon the roof while she slept. He tied a nail upon a piece of string, lay down on the cornic, leaned over and tapped the bed-room window with the nail. Mrs. Merriweather meanwhile was not asleep, but she followed him up, shut the trap-door in the loft and went back to bed. Merriweather concluded to give it up and turn in, but to his dismay the trap would not open. To make matters worse, a policeman who had been watching him felt certain he was a burglar, and began to practise at him with his revolver. The manner in which that old man dodged about those chimneys, clad in that simple robe of white, would have done credit to a per-former on the flying trapeze. At last he former on the flying trapeze. At last he came to his trap-door, and, finding that it had been opened, he went down. On entering his bed-room, he saw a man turning down the gas. As soon as he shouted "thieves," the man also shouted, and the woman in the room gave a wild and awful yell. Then the man turned up the gas and seized a pistol, and as Merriweather dashed down stairs he perceived that he had got into the wrong house. As he flew to the parior and perceived that he had got into the wrong house. As he fiew to the parlor and hid under the sofa, the other man woke the whole neighborhood with a rattle, and in ten minutes six policemen came in, and after a search dragged Merriwenther out and dragged him to the station bouse. When he came out in the morning he walked home in a pair of the turnkey's pants, and began to eat his breakfast without asking a blessing, and when Mrs. Merriweather inquired whether his muttered ejaculations, "fool" and "idiot," referred to her, he said she might wear them if they fit her. He will probably not play any fresh practical jokes on Mrs. Merriweather soon again.
